Originally, this was going to be something entirely different. My initial idea was to use a series of graphics in differing styles, following the verse scheme put forth but Theodore Giesel (better known as Dr. Suess). I am quite able to crank out doggerel verse at the drop of a hat, and have even won wagers with my ability to do so*.

It was to be "One Skunk, Two Skunk. Read 'Skunk', Blew Skunk..." In other words, a series of puns, alliterative inferences and cheap spoofey pictures. However, as is normal for me, I got distracted. I had been practicing skunks- the subject being a rare one for me- trying to fit them into the various styles I anticipated using. It wasn't coming easy. I could do the more toonish styles and the 'native' style with no problem, but the variants were giving me fits.

There it stood, me bashing on the sketchpad, and time unwinding rapidly. 'Real' work kept intruding, performing the most irresistible form of distraction quite often, and my innate ability to start drawing and go off on a tangent ate quite a bit of the remaining time.

A panicked series of phone calls informed me that the deadline was here, and could I please get it in gear. I did so on the final day, starting to crank out the planned graphics.

Then it went off in directions unplanned. Staring a deadline in the face is never pleasant, and this was no different than any other time- only this time I suddenly realized, "Hey, I can do what ever takes my fancy! Deadlines run two ways..." With this important factor lurking in the back of my head, I began to blue pencil- and found it going in directions unplanned.

I roughed quite a few things, a story forming as I went along. I did more than needed, a decent series of graphics taking shape.

Then I was faced with which of the lot was to be used. They had to be at least partially finished, and my roughs are rougher than most. Then began a session of editorial choosing, finish pencilling the ones chosen as I went along. Time was a consideration, as that deadline lay just ahead.

The story is sorta still there, though much reduced. The first few graphics actually almost fit the original scheme I had in mind- though not very well.

Now, why am I bothering to write this? Aside from being a cheap way (I'm not being paid for this) of pumping up the file count, I've had a history of releasing a 'Read me' file along with anything I let loose onto the world. I've decided to continue this fine tradition, it does have the added bonus of the aforementioned increase in the final tally, which the producer will probably like. It also allows me to to slip an apology and explanation in if I feel it necessary- though the apology portion is incredibly rare, as I'm usually too busy giggling to think of it.

Anyway, an almost-story using bad graphics follows. Enjoy if you can.

For my friends who would like to know,
my character– Frenchie the Skunk– has five sisters and a brother, each one born on a different day of the week. Can you guess who was born when? Here is an old nursery rhyme to help you out...

*Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child has to work
for its living,
But a child that's born on the Sabbath day,
Is fair and wise and good
and gay.*
