The Covers

Tom is the only artist that has never been seen in daylight. He has sharp fanglike teeth and runs around in a dusty ol' cape. We suspect the worst... yep, we think he's anemic. The fact that he doesn't wear anything except that cape seems to attract a lot of attention. He has been arrested six times for evading probation, which is really, really weird since he isn't on probation. The cops just like arresting him.

Tom makes a living drawing comics... Ha-Ha.... sorry, it's an old joke—we really like to think there's money in this profession. He really works in computer software. Tom has to live with the fact that he used to edit the Eros Comix line from Fantagraphics.

Tom Verre has been doing anthropomorphic art since the late '80's. He has art in Red Shetland, Equine and Skunk. His work has appeared in:

Shon Howell

Shon is something of an anomaly. He does great artwork and we like him, but he kinda works at the Antarctic Press offices. See, it's like an oxymoron... he works here and we like his stuff. Strange, eh? We also call him an oxymoron at times. If we give him doughnuts he won't hit us as hard.

Shon used to be an editor at Antarctic Press, but he gave it up to pursue a more creative vocation—he bakes pies at Brenner Printing every morning. Before Antarctic Press, Shon was some bigwig executive-type for Gainax (a Japanese company that was involved in anime and modeling). He worked there for years... until everyone realized he couldn't speak Japanese ... and he lost his bigwig.

Shon Howell's work has appeared in Xxxenophile and Beauty of the Beasts.

Shon Howell's work has appeared in Xxxenophile and Beauty of the BeastsAnd he's colored a few Ninja High Schools and Mighty Tiny covers. His work has appeared in:

Shon is the creator of "Jaux the Lion" but, we don't hold that against him.

Phil Morrissey

Phil Morrissey writes, "In a mythical land, called Missouri, a lone cartoonist was born to a family of forlorn tornadoes, looking for Kansas. After this gentleman grew up, he decided to be an artist and draw stuff. Many publishing houses liked his art so much that they printed these odd works. And now we all know him in mainstream life as Saddam Hussein. Thank you."

Well-II-II-II! Actually Phil was a Missouri Tornado, but they moved the franchise to Kansas, and he stayed to become a St. Louis Cardinal. After a losing season, he was excommunicated and became a tool-and-die worker for a bunch of CIA rogue agents. His cover as an artist is working just fine. Phil's neighbors are the Simpsons and a family named Flanders. He claims they're both a bit goofy—especially this one kid.....

Phil Morrissey is responsible for the Steller Babes strip in Vortext Magazine and has done artwork for the new Wiz-War Game: Chessex Games. He is noted for doing illos for Pyramid Magazine (2nd gen Murphis Rules, etc.) And was the art director for Rapport Games.

His work has appeared in:

MEDICAL RECORDS:

en years ago the world was a different place. A regolitican was incorpying the White House, REVENSE OF THE NERDS was in the theaters, and the dollar was worth a lot nerce. The comic industry was also a different place. The face of the comics industry was changed by direct sales and the Nack and white glat. Why all the motalities all of a saddlet? Well len wears are. Antarctic Press first started publishing. Ten years are Antarctic Press was a different place. The office was a converted carport and storage room. Our first computer was a $2500 super computer called a Maximosh Plus. The first employee made $50 a month. The first comic was made entirely from newsprint, cover and all. Ahh, the good old days. Things have certainly changed since then. We survived the gluts, the speculations, and the bankrunteies other companies seemed to fall prey to all too often. I could keep on talking about the post and what we did that allowed us to persevere, but I believe our actions speak louder than any words.

Instead, let's talk about the future. What do I see in the future?

At Attarctic Ptess I see an ever-growing company, striving for alternatives and seeking divensity. I see more recognition and acceptance from the fina press. I see improving quality and higher standards. I see better relations with our fans and readiers. Of course, I predicted the same things for years ago and will predict the same thing to years ago and will predict the same thing to years from now. If we do not continue to hiffill those prophecies, we will have failed so a contrasty.

In the comics industry I see continued flux.

The industry is still ill_defined and will require time to feel itself out. The melestry will continue to downsize to a few companies publishing a variety of works and expend to a hundred creater-owned companies, each publishing in one file once every month or too. I predict the continued exploitation of the finite comic book officir where damand austher. The industry has for the most part likeld to get more eacher sints the market. How many times have you soon a movie or

and a sign of these hands are sign of the dedriven a cor or eaten at a restaurant that you fell in low with and recommended to a friend? Can the same thing be said about the comic book industry? How many time-toyou see people around a water code that, about how innovative, creatine or thought providing a comic book was? Whish the industry we talk among ourselves, patting conviews on the back and landing or unrelieve on the back and landing or unrelieve in the back and landing or long how are the work of the control of the long of the control of the control of the long of the control of the control of the the industry she read of the flavors, the

France or a CBG swort!

Is the industry an entertainment medium? If so, we have failed to show the same success and progress as music, movies, books and relevision. Is the industry a commodity, where you can make a quick back? I don't think comics will replace gold or stocks or frozen concentrated orange jaine as a visible commodity, and the speculation glat of the most certainly moves it. So where do we real up? My statements are not meant to insult the industry, for without it this company would not exist, but to show that my predictions are based on cold reality. I wish I could predict what will happen in the world. I know that the republicans are in power, crine is getting worse, and I pay too much in taxes. All I can hope is that there won't be another REVENGE OF THE NERDS movie.

Foe Rosales

Joe was raised by wolves, which was really strange since the wolves were living at the Brookfield Zoo in Chicago, Illinois. No one noticed him for thirteen years until one day a keeper wandered into the cages and found him drawing at an art table. The worst part was having to escape every day to go to school.

Today, Joe runs a school for the dead in his spare time. The money isn't grand, but the students are very quiet and don't create much of a fuss.

In college, Joe Rosales created a strip called Raymond, but he is best known for creating the Wild Lifers.

Coivo Rovainen, James Ernest & Carol Monahan

Toivo Rovainen, James Ernest, and Carol Monahan have been dead for many years.

Death, hasn't slowed their artistic enthusiasm, however, since they seem to be churning out great stuff. The only downside is trying to get mail delivered to their joint grave site. On the upside, the bill collectors stay away, too.

To be perfectly honest, we here at Antarctic Press don't really think these three great people are really dead... they keep answering their phones. Our past experience has shown us that the dead just don't answer telephone calls, just try calling our editorial department. We Know.

The editorial department also knows that the line "Blondes fall real slow" is true. We dropped several people from the Antarctic Penthouse and noted the difference. It seems that the lighter the hair, the slower the falling body. And, weirdly enough, males seem to fall slower than females. We're still waiting for John Schnieder (the blond, Dukes of Hazzard & Heaven Help Us star) to land. As a sidebar, Madonna dropped like a rock.

Toivo's artwork has appeared in:

FURRLOUGH

Noel Cominack & Peter Stoller

Noel Tominack had been interested in stories about animals since childhood, but it was not until 1985 after seeing "Rock & Rule" did he find funny animal fandom while searching for a comic-book adaptation. Applying his desire to be a writer to fandom, Noel teamed up with artist Brian O'Connell in 1986 and began to pitch his idea of a story based on the "Mayflower Madam" in the fanzine Furversion. Noel's story, "Anthropomorphic Escorts, Inc" (AEI) was released as a one-shot small-press title 1988 with moderate success.

After Brian O'Connell moved to the west coast, Noel teamed up with New York animation student Peter Stoller, the first of their stories appeared in Rowr-Brazzle and were later reprinted in Furrlough and Wild Life Tales. Noel feels Stoller's background in classical animation and attention to detail has helped make their stories something special. Due to the phenomenal reaction to these initial stories, more projects are planned, including telling more about Lyle's life, as well as the possibility of reviving AEI.

Noel Tominack is currently a graduate student at the University of Maryland Baltimore County and an assistant System Administrator with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Peter Stoller discovered furry fandom while attending the New York School of Visual arts. He learned of it through fans of Japanese animation and became interested after seeing furry comics at many of the New York animation meetings. After graduating with a Bachelor's degree in 1987, Peter began to contribute to several fanzines and become acquainted with the various people in comics and fandom at the time.

One Peter's best-known works is "The Bottom End" which tells of a relationship that developed between an equine bouncer and a patron at the bar where he works. Set in New York City, Stoller worked hard to recreate the feeling of the Big Apple, doing extensive research on the neighborhoods and bar where the story takes place.

Aside from working with Noel Tominack, Peter has several projects of his own in mind, as well as continuing to contribute to various fanzines and comics.

The above is all a lie. The last two sentences are false.

Both have artwork that has only appeared in Furrlough #1, reprinted here!

L'amazing Productions

L'amazing Productions is the name for those two wacky Canadians, Todd Sutherland and Charles Davies. We aren't really sure which is Todd and which is Charles, since they were introduced together. All we know is that Todd was on the cover of Playgirl magazine and Charles was the one on America's Most Wanted—he's known as case #189.

There's not much we can say about these two cool dudes, since all descriptive phrases are not allowed to cross the Canadian Border. Geez, these regulations are getting harsher and harsher. Just read their stuff and enjoy, enjoy!

L'amazing Productions (Todd Sutherland and Charles Davies) are the creators of the most popular "Mange" series. Their work has appeared in:

FURRLOUGH #6, 12, 16 WILD LIFE #1, 2, 3 GENUS #1, 3
