Character Description

Elania could be described as a pragmatical mare, or even cold by some people, since her martial training and the fact to be a Spellsword have heavily influenced her behaviour. Elania is the daughter of a couple of artisans, who weren't exactly rich, but not even poor, so she had an adequate education. Unfortunately, while she was ready to be sent to the Arcanium and try to study to become a wizard, her parents passed away during an epidemic, so she weren't able to pay the rent for the mage academy. Even so, she was taken with other orphans to be trained to become a city guard, since the epidemic also took a heavy toll on them. Despite her future to become a wizard was changed, she where still able to obtain a training as Spellsword, when she was able to prove to be also capable to cast spells and to be trained with the sword. Elania had to study and work hard, since as an Orphan she had no one who could help or take care of her, so while growing up, she get used to work alone or at least to be able to find a solution without waiting for the others.

Combat:

While she always tries to remain calm and to avoid a useless use of violence, she is also quick to engage his opponents without hesitating. She knows that when the talk is over, only violence can end an argument, so she always tries to do her best. Being a Spellsword also allows her to have access to few spells, and she uses the Lesser Weapon Enchantment only if the situation requires every advantage she could get. She is trained to try to get all the attention on herself or at least to distract those who are attacking the more weakest members of his group or the most vulnerable.

Elania always shows honour to those who earn it or at least seems to follow an honourable way, while for those who demonstrate to only use tricks or other dirty tactics she usually show no mercy to them, since she knows they will probably try to trick her or even worst. Her scar is a permanent reminder of when she shown mercy to those who later betrayed her trust.
