Character Description

As many other griffins out there, Rościsław is greedy, grumpy and it also swears a lot, usually in the griffin dialect that it's quite strange to hear. He was one of the many street urchins of Griffonstone, always looking to live the day stealing the necessary to live while avoiding to get caught and beaten up by older griffins. Knowing that he would probably ended to be one of the many griffins wasting their already miserable lives in what once was a huge metropolis, he decided to leave and try his fortune elsewhere. Used to live in harsh conditions of poverty, he find out that the equestrian cities where a better place to live since even if there where others who lived in poverty, it was still better than a place where everyone tries to steal everything to you or worst, to sell you as a slave somewhere, for few coins. Also for some reason, Ponies seems excessively gullible, or at least is what he thinks.

He quickly founds his place in the equestrian society, or to be more precise, outside the society. He was able to learn more tricks and also where able to learn how to pick locks or to disarm similar mechanisms, since he were able to better handle things with his claws. Even if he usually thinks only for himself, he is used to be more compliant or servile to others, especially if he tries to escape from a bad situation or when he just want that they will think of him as a wimp or a simpleton, while he is not. With the members of his group he tries to don't let them understand what he is actually thinking or he tries to follow the strongest or the most authoritarian member of the group, hoping to obtain a sort of protection from him.

Combat:

Rościsław learned that travelling alone could be quite dangerous, so he usually prefer to stick with others except griffins. During combat he maintains a low profile, usually trying to use his Backstab Feat to increase the damage output dealt by his claws. He never charges first and always allows those who have a better training in combat to attack first and attract all the attention, while he tries to sneak behind the enemies. He will stay close to his allies if the situation will turn badly for them but he will not hesitate to fly away from danger, or at least to reach a safer spot nearby. He also tries to lie, run away or pretend to surrender if put in a bad situation, only to flee or attack when they will turn their backs on him, mocking them he then wins.
